

JONES FUSSELL, LLP

Sam J. Collett, III

Sam J. Collett, III joined the firm in 2015 after graduating from the LSU Paul M. Hebert Law Center. He participates in a diverse practice in both the litigation and transactional arenas, and he has experience dealing with regulatory permitting and compliance issues for clients. Sam also handles estate matters such as wills, trusts, and planning, as well as NFA firearms trusts.

Sam obtained his Bachelor degree in International Trade & Finance from the LSU E.J. Ourso College of Business, with a minor in Spanish. He was awarded the Chancellor's Medal for earning a 4.0 cumulative GPA. While at LSU, Sam worked with Spanish-speaking students at local high schools, helping them to bridge the language gap to better understand their schoolwork.

Sam earned his J.D./D.C.L., cum laude, from the LSU Paul M. Hebert Law Center in May of 2015. He received multiple CALI awards and was appointed to the Chancellor's List and a Paul M. Hebert Scholar. He also studied comparative law at Université Jean Moulin (Lyon III) in Lyon, France. Prior to joining Jones Fussell, Sam clerked with multiple firms in Baton Rouge, and interned with the Honorable Judge William J. Crain at the 1st Circuit Court of Appeal in Baton Rouge.

Born in Bogalusa, Louisiana, Sam now resides in Covington. He is an avid outdoorsman. When not at the firm, Sam can be found chasing fish and ducks in the Louisiana marsh and hunting or training with his dog.
